Programme

What do we know about diversity in our everyday university life of studies, education, research and administration? What dimensions does it have and what challenges and opportunities are related to it? Interested parties from all status groups of the faculty and other LUH institutions are cordially invited to listen, discuss, learn and jointly develop suggestions for improvement that can be implemented in everyday faculty life. A colourful mix of scientific input, reports on experiences from professional practice and everyday university life, combined with practical exercises and workshops in small groups under expert guidance offers inspiration and opportunity for this purpose.

The interactive format offers space to exchange topic-related thoughts and ideas on one's own university and academic everyday life. The aim is to raise awareness and to reflect together in order to identify practical fields of action and personal needs at the personal level and at the institutional level. The workshops are led and supervised by the respective experts in the subject area and the team of the Equal Opportunities Officer of the Faculty of Natural Sciences. The results are presented and discussed in the final plenary session.

Main focus:

- Dimensions of Diversity: Factual situation in the everyday life of science and studies
- First generation students /doctoral students
- Queer /LGBTIQ+
- Internationality: experiences of migration and racism
- Possible actions for better implementation (best practice)
