The Faculty of Natural Sciences invites applications for a

University Professorship (Salary Scale W 3 NBesO)
in Plant Physiology

starting as soon as possible.

The person to be appointed shall represent the subject "Plant Physiology" as a whole in research and education.
The research focus shall be preferably in the area of photobiology and related topics in plant photosynthesis. The research concept shall foster the research activities of the institutes in basic and applied plant sciences and supplement them strategically.
The active cooperation within the research initiative Soil-Plants-Human interactions as well as other research cooperatives of the faculty is expected.
The professor takes over the teaching responsibilities for (molecular) plant physiology in the B.Sc. Biology, Biochemistry and Life Science programmes and in the corresponding M.Sc programmes at the LUH.

Conditions of appointment are in accordance with § 25, Niedersachsen Higher Education Act (NHG).

Part-time employment can be arranged on request.

As an equal opportunities employer, Leibniz Universität Hannover has set itself the strategic aim of significantly increasing the proportion of women. Female scientists are therefore particularly encouraged to apply. Applications from abroad are especially welcome. Equally qualified candidates with disabilities will be given preference.

In its mission statement, Leibniz Universität Hannover attaches great importance to the international orientation of teaching and research. At the same time, it places major value on the intensive guidance and support of its students and on the university's close ties to the region and to Niedersachsen. Its professors are thus expected to take up residence in the Region of Hannover.
Successful candidates who have reached the age of fifty by the time of appointment and who do not already have civil servant status will be given an employment contract.
